

Bad man steals a computer

Yesterday in Bells Farm Primary School an unknown person stole YR 5's computer.

The crime scene investigators arrived at dinnertime. When they came into the classroom they saw, straight away, a foot print. They also noticed the computer had gone. The footprint had told them that the person came from outside because of the dirt found on the foot print. The investigators noticed that the person took the £200 computer instead of the £800 apple laptop.

After they got closer to the desk they saw that the ink pad was knocked over and fingerprints were on the tables. It looked like the intruder was using the tables to get to the other side of the classroom. Luckily Miss Birmingham had pictures of the teacher's fingerprints and footprints.

The investigators saw that Mr Baddhan (the IT teacher) had a plain whirl, which matched the fingerprints found. The foot prints also matched the sole of his shoe. They also found a note on the teacher's desk saying 'I needed this today'. This was important to the investigation because they could match the handwriting to samples they had already been given. The handwriting again matched Mr Baddhan's.

When asked, Mrs Bosworth, the class teaching assistant and witness, stated "I saw a person that wore black trousers who was quite tall." From what Mrs Bosworth had described the investigators suspected Mr Baddhan.

All of the facts pointed to Mr Baddhan. Two investigators, Holly and Chloe, found the computer next to Mr Baddhan on his desk.

When Mr Baddhan was found the investigators questioned him. He said "I have been planning on taking YR 5's computer for many weeks."

Now Miss Birmingham has got her computer back in good condition. She is now keeping a close eye on Mr Baddhan.
